

American Collegiate Rowing Association 2011 National Championship

August 13, 2010

Ann Arbor, MI – The American Collegiate Rowing Association announces that the date and site of the 2011 National Championship regatta will be on May 28 & 29, 2011 in Gainesville, Georgia and hosted by the Lake Lanier Rowing Club. The site was the home of the 1996 Olympic regatta, and has hosted numerous large collegiate regattas since the course was built.

“We are pleased to take our national championship to Lake Lanier,” said ACRA President Gregg Hartsuff. “Having worked on the venue for a month during the Atlanta Games, and brought my team there for a few other races and a spring break training, I am confident that the course will provide fair racing, and that as a whole the venue will make the regatta a great experience for our student-athletes.”

Hartsuff also said that the area offers some additional perks such as cheap and available flights, convenient and affordable lodging options, and a local organizing committee who is excited to have the championship there. Additional details of the regatta will be released in the coming months on the ACRA website:
www.americancollegiaterowing.com